INTERVIEW OF THE MONTH

Interview with Yann, Information Systems & Website Manager at Business Science Institute.

Aline: Hello Yann, you are our IT manager. What does your work involve?

Yann: Hello Aline, at the moment my work is focused on the development and implementation of software tools. Overall, my objective is to centralise data in order to facilitate the transmission of information between the members of the support team, the professors, the doctoral students and the accreditation bodies. Occasionally, I solve problems related to the use of e-mails or software.

Aline: Can you tell our readers about what led you to join Business Science Institute?

Yann : In 2012, I received an e-mail from Prof. Michel Kalika. At that time, Business Science Institute was just a "small organisation" where everything still remained to be done. My first mission was to set up a digital strategy for the website. We improved the website so that it would come up on all searches related to the Executive DBA (in French, English and German). Then, other missions were entrusted to me to meet other needs.

Aline: What have been the major developments since you arrived and how do you envisage things in the future?

Yann: Business Science Institute attracts Internet users from all over the world. When we analyse the statistics, we notice that a large majority of them consult the website, social networks or attend seminars/conferences with a smartphone or a tablet. The current website was no longer adapted to this new way of accessing information. We therefore decided a few months ago to redesign the site so that it could respond to current practices while anticipating future needs.

Aline: How has the health crisis changed your activities and those of Business Science Institute?

Yann: The health crisis has not greatly changed the nature of my activities as I have always worked remotely! However, we have been encouraged to find alternatives to our physical events (international week, seminars) and to find other ways of bringing together members of the institution (notably by setting up Microsoft Teams and Zoom).

Aline: Your activities lead you to be involved in educational innovation. Which do you think have been the most impactful ones for Business Science Institute?

Yann: The quality of the support provided to doctoral students is one of the key criteria audited by accreditation bodies. Beyond a certain threshold, it becomes difficult to keep track of everything that happens in an organisation. Exchanges can take place over different communication channels (phone, WhatsApp, Skype, face-to-face). With over 200 current DBA students at Business Science Institute, you can imagine the complexity of keeping track of them. After several months of reflection, we decided to set up a simple and easy-to-use reporting system for professors and doctoral students. We receive a copy of all the exchanges made by e-mail. A software programme analyses them and alerts the academic support team when a doctoral student has not been active for a certain period of time.

Since 2020, we have also been recording our doctoral supervisory seminars. If the doctoral student wishes, they can access their own video in order to review the presentation and listen to the feedback from the professors. This feedback is an essential part of improving their written thesis or their oral presentation material. If the DBA student agrees, we can also make these recordings available to other participants. Even though this might not seem to be a major pedagogical innovation, it is quite rare to see it in doctoral institutions.

Aline: And one last question, are you more of a Mac or Microsoft person?

Yann: I mainly use Mac! Each operating system has its advantages and disadvantages. That's why I also work with Linux and Windows.

BUSINESS SCIENCE INSTITUTE FACULTY NEWS

Jean-François Gajewski, member of the Business Science Institute faculty and Professor at iaelyon School of Management, wins an ANR call for projects.

Jean-François Gajewski and his team of researchers have won an ANR call for projects, marking a first for the Magellan research laboratory. The research project, called REMOTAUDIT, and the result of a long-standing international collaboration with Canada, was selected by the "Innovation, Work" scientific evaluation committee. The project will start in April 2022 and will last 4 years.

ALUMNI

PORTRAIT DU MOIS

Dr. Frédéric Favre, a graduate of Business Science Institute (Geneva cohort n°1, 2013-2016) talks to us about the different impacts of his Executive DBA studies.

Caroline: Hello Dr. Favre, you were one of the first students to enrol at Business Science Institute, what were your motivations?

Frédéric: I was looking for a better understanding of what academia could bring to a business practitioner. Understand better, to work better.

Caroline: 6 years after you defended your thesis and obtained your Executive Doctorate in Business Administration, what are your observations? Has this training enabled you to evolve in your professional sphere?

Frédéric: The programme helps me on a daily basis thanks to the perspective that the DBA has given me, and has also helped me to better interpret the messages coming from the academic world. Maybe this has been even more true during the pandemic.

Caroline: In your opinion, how does Business Science Institute meet the expectations of practising managers?

Frédéric: Beyond a certain (hierarchical) level, managers can no longer just call on consultants/experts and wait for their conclusions, they must co-construct the analysis to guarantee that the deliverable is of sufficient quality. To do this, the tools used are mainly based on academic theory, research, methodologies, epistemological positions, etc. It is therefore necessary to be able to understand these processes, which is what Business Science Institute provides.

Caroline: Your thesis was about the adaptive performance of middle managers. What were the reasons that led you to this choice?

Frédéric: In business, the question often arises as to why some people perform where others do not. In an increasingly agile professional world, it was important for me to understand what could influence - or not - the adaptive performance of the essential link in the hierarchical chain, namely middle managers.

Caroline: And if you had to do it all over again, what would your topic be today?

Frédéric: Given my position as State Councillor of my Canton in Switzerland (Ministry), I think that a comparison of managerial practices between those prevailing in the public sector and those prevailing in the private sector could be interesting.

THE CONVERSATION

An article co-authored by Prof. Anne Bartel-Radic and her DBA student Barbara Ofstadt (Frankfurt, DE No. 2, 2020-2023).

In Germany, the apprenticeship training system guarantees a level of employment among young people that is admired at European level. Moreover, 47% of professional and managerial staff in Germany are trained in this way, followed by further training with qualifications such as 'technician' (Techniker) or 'master craftsman' (Industriemeister). They are thus more numerous than the 39% of senior managers with an academic background (i.e., with at least a Bachelor's degree).

German apprenticeship training is often cited as an example in France, as a way of enabling professional integration into companies and as a remedy against youth unemployment. However, 86% of German secondary school students are enrolled in programmes combining work and school, whereas only about 25% are in France. What is the reason for this?
